1. While in Montevideo, Uruguay in approximately the last week of March 1955, I observed an unidentified object under the following circumstances: It was approximately 8:30 PM., a dark clear night, no moon with many bright stars in evidence. I was approaching number 3064 Layenda Patria on foot in company with my wife when our attention was directed to an object hovering in the sky. This same object was being observed by many other people standing in the street, looking out of windows, etc. I was looking southwest at an angle approximately 15 degrees off the horizon at an object I estimate to have been at an altitude of 1500 to two thousand feet. The object was an extremely bright light, approximating in color that of an old-fashioned carbon wire electric light; however, of such intensity that the size of the object or its outline could not be determined.
2. When first viewed by me the object was hovering and there was a smaller second light which appeared to be immediately below it and of the same color. I estimate that it remained stationary for a period of three to four minutes while I was looking at it and that it then moved in a generally southerly direction at about the speed of a modern transport aircraft in flight; that in flight the intensity of the light diminished in regular pulsations. I timed the pulsations and the light was bright for four seconds and then dimmed for one second; I watched the object until buildings finally obscured it from my and my wife's view. No noise was heard by us in connection with the movement of the object. I am certain it was not any conventional type of an aircraft or aerial missile currently in use.
3. The exact date of this unidentified flying object can be determined from newspaper articles in the Montevideo Press which appeared the following day.
